Modification of Recommendation

Substantial Assistance, Acceptance of Responsibility or Remorse

Definitions Based on Departure Reasons Were Added to the Instructions for FY2022

1. Showed positive or promising behavior while awaiting sentencing (e.g., drug free, employment, education, lifestyle change, etc.).
2. Began rehabilitation process without court intervention; took initiative to make change (e.g., enrolled in or completed drug treatment, mental health counseling, found housing, etc.).
3. Demonstrated responsibility for the support and care of family members (e.g., providing financial support, working with social services, etc.).
4. Maintained or secured employment or obtained job skills before sentencing.
5. Completed school, college, or a training program before sentencing.
6. Admitted guilt shortly after the offense, during arrest, etc., and prior to an appearance in court.
7. Prevented the crime from escalating into more serious offense (e.g., prevented a death, rape, etc.)
8. Current offense is an old crime that was committed when the defendant had a different lifestyle.
9. Behavior was out of the norm and likelihood of recidivism is low (e.g., no prior record or limited record; extremely young or elderly).
10. Time served is sufficient based on the defendant's demeanor in court or the defendant's demonstrated acceptance of responsibility/expression of remorse prior to appearance in court.
11. Substantial assistance as determined by the Commonwealth and accepted by the judge.

BASED ON DEPARTURE REASONS,
THE COMMISSION DEVELOPED A NEW FACTOR THAT ESTABLISHES THE LOW END OF
THE GUIDELINES RANGE TO ZERO OR TIME SERVED WHEN THE JUDGE BELIEVES THAT THE DEFENDANT HAS GOOD REHABILITATION POTENTIAL

Separate from the main analysis, researchers examined the reasons cited by judges for departing from the current Probation Violation Guidelines. In particular, researchers were interested in the judge's assessment of the probationer's rehabilitation potential (good or poor) and the extent this was cited as the reason for departing from the guidelines. To do this, the analysts examined all FY2014-FY2019 SRR cover sheets (not just cases selected for the study sample). This analysis grouped offenders by judicial departure reasons - either good rehabilitation potential, poor rehabilitation potential, or neither cited - and compared effective revocation sentences for each group. Figure 48 shows the results. The median, mean, and maximum sentence for cases in which the judge cited good rehabilitation potential as the reason for departing from the PVGs are significantly lower than for the groups with poor potential or no such departure noted. Of particular note, the median or "typical" case with good potential noted received a sentence of zero (or time served). Based on these findings, the Commission concluded that a new factor could be added to the PVGs to allow the judge to adjust the low-end recommendation to "time served" (i.e., zero) if the judge finds the probationer has good rehabilitation potential. Because this factor would be based on judicial determination rather than currently available data sources, it is not possible to estimate the proportion of the study sample who would have been scored on this factor or how it might interact with other factors. Therefore, it was constructed as a standalone factor which does not contribute points to the total worksheet score. VCSC Annual Report, December 1, 2020, page 59.
